

(上接C19版)

Table with multiple columns containing company names, codes, and financial data. The table is organized into several vertical sections, likely representing different categories of companies or financial metrics. Each row contains a small amount of text, including what appears to be a company name, a numerical code, and possibly a date or financial value. The text is dense and follows a structured layout typical of a financial disclosure document.

(下转C21版)