

Table with multiple columns containing financial data, company names, and dates. The table is organized into several vertical sections, likely representing different categories of securities or companies. Each row contains a small number of data points, including what appears to be a stock code or identifier, a company name, and numerical values.